Merriam, G. & C., Company. Springfield, Mass. Founded 1831, by George and Charles Merriam, who had previously been printers in West Brookfield, Mass. George Merriam began by publishing school readers. When Noah Webster died in 1843 the Merriams bought the exclusive publishing rights to his An American Dictionary of the English Language, first published in 1828 in two volumes. A second edition was printed in 1840, and it was this edition which came into the possession of G. & C. Merriam. Chauncey A. Goodrich, Webster's son-in-law and heir, was installed as editor, and he prepared a one volume edition in 1847. In 1859 illustrations were introduced into the dictionary for the first time. In 1864 the famous Webster's "Unabridged" edition was published under the editorship of Noah Porter, later president of Yale University. The next complete revision was in 1890. Another revision appeared in 1909 and was called Webster's New International Dictionary, and was edited by William T. Harris, assisted by F. Sturges Allen, George Lyman Kittredge, John Livingston Lowes, and others. In 1934 William Allan Neilson, Thomas A. Knott, and others, edited the "Second Edition" of Webster's New International Dictionary. John P. Bethel has been general editor since 1935. The fifth edition of Webster's Collegiate Dictionary appeared in 1936. First called G. & C. Merriam, the firm name was changed to G &

Moon Hoax, The. By Richard Adams Locke (1859). The original hoax took place in 1835 when a series of articles were published in the New York Sun under the title, Great Astronomical Discoveries, Lately Made by Sir John Herschel, which announced that a vast human population had been discovered on the moon. It was believed by thousands, just as the Mars hoax of Orson Welles given over the radio in 1939 found frightened believers. Augustus De Morgan in his Budget of Paradoxes (1872) attributed the hoax to Jean Nicolas Nicollet, but Edgar Allan Poe, who knew Locke intimately, substantiated his claim to the authorship and even said it anticipated his own story Hans Phaall.

Offset. Printing process. The original copy of material to be printed is first photographed. A sensitized zinc or aluminum plate receives the impression when a strong light is thrown upon it through the photographic negative. The plate is then developed, water and then ink are applied to it, and a sheet of rubber is placed over the plate to receive the impression. The rubber sheet is then placed on a cylinder, and final printing on paper is made from the rubber sheet. The process saves time and money by eliminating typesetting, etc. Many books are printed by offset. The result is a lighter and softer printed page.

In 1872 the American Literary Gazette and Publishers' Circular was merged with it. This latter publication was an off-spring of Norton's Literary Advertiser, founded by Charles B. Norton, in Philadelphia, 1851, and changed in 1852 to Norton's Literary Gazette and Publishers' Circular. In 1855 it was purchased by George W. Childs and superseded by the American Publishers' Circular and Literary Gazette. In 1856 the Criterion was merged with it. When Leypoldt bought it its name had changed to American Literary Gazette and Publishers' Circular. Leypoldt's Monthly Book Trade Circular, abandoned in 1872, was resumed in 1875 as the Literary News, which began a new series in 1880 and expired in 1904. The Publishers' Weekly, particularly since 1876, when booksellers and librarians systematized their records as a result of the exposition at Philadelphia, has attempted to list every book published in America. Frederic G. Melcher is now president. See Frank L. Mott's History of American Magazines, v.3 (1938).

Scribner Book Store, The. New York City. Retail department of Charles Scribner's Sons. Founded 1846. It carries one of the largest stocks of books in the United States, and has a rare book department headed by David Randall (q.v.). It also has a separate children's books department, and a sporting books department. Fine bindings and de luxe sets are featured. Nicholas Wreden (q.v.) is manager.

Scribner's, Charles & Sons. New York. Publishers and booksellers. Founded 1846, by Charles Scribner and Isaac D. Baker under the name Baker and Scribner. It began by purchasing the religious book stock of John S. Taylor. Baker died in 1850, and in 1857 Charles Scribner took as partner, Charles Welford, formerly of the book importing firm of Bartlett and Welford (John Russell Bartlett retiring from this business in 1849). Two firm names were adopted, Scribner and Welford, which imported foreign books, and Charles Scribner, which carried on the American trade. In 1864 Andrew Armstrong was admitted as a partner, and in 1869 Edward Seymour was admitted into partnership. On the death of Scribner in 1871, the business was headed by his son, John Blair Scribner, the name of the American firm becoming Scribner, Armstrong and Company, and the importing firm, Scribner, Welford & Armstrong. The year following the death of Edward Seymour in 1877, John Blair Scribner and his brother Charles (1854–1930) bought out the Armstrong interest and the entire business reverted to the family of the founder and became known as Charles Scribner's Sons, the name it still bears. John Blair Scribner died in 1879, and his brother, Arthur H. Scribner (1859-1932), joined the firm in 1884. Charles Scribner, grandson of the founder, entered the business in 1913, became president of the company in 1932. The first great success of Scribner's was J. T. Headley's Napoleon and His Marshalls. This was followed by The Sacred Mountains, which sold a half million copies. Reveries of a Bachelor by Ike Marvel was popular, as was J. C. Holland's Bitter Sweet. A large venture was the American edition of The Encyclopedia Britannica. In later years were published such popular authors as Joel Chandler Harris, Thomas Nelson Page, Frank R. Stockton, Robert Louis Stevenson, J. M. Barrie, Francis Hodgson Burnett, Richard Harding Davis, John Galsworthy, G. A. Henty, James G. Huncker, Edith Wharton, Henry van Dyke, H. C. Bunner, Theodore Roosevelt, Harold Frederic, Ernest Thompson Seton, and more recently Arthur Train, Will James, James Truslow Adams, Thomas Wolfe, Ernest Hemingway, Stark Young, Robert Sherwood, and Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings. Major works have been Lange's Commentary, The Ante Nicene, The Nicene and Post Nicene Fathers, International Critical Commentary, The Dictionary of American Biography, The Dictionary of American History and the Modern Student's Library. In the juvenile field is the Scribner Illustrated Classics. The present head of the juvenile book department is Alice Dalgliesh (q.v.). Among the editors of Scribner's at the present are Maxwell Perkins (q.v.); John Hall Wheelock (q.v.); Wallace Myers, and Will D. Howe (q.v.). In the magazine field Scribner's have published Scribner's Monthly (q.v.); Hours at Home (q.v.); St. Nicholas (q.v.); Scribner's Magazine (q.v.); and the Book Buyer (q.v.). There is an educational department headed by Edward Thomas Sumner Lord (q.v.), with branches in Boston, Atlanta, Chicago, Dallas, and San Francisco. The subscription department is headed by Carroll B. Merritt. Whitney Darrow (q.v.) is head of the trade department, William Savage head of the religious literature department, and William C. Weber advertising manager. Harold Cadmus is director of the Scribner Press. See also Charles Scribner, J. C. Holland, Robert Bridges, W. C. Brownell, Roswell Smith, Edward Livermore Burlingame, Joseph Hawley Chapin, Edward Bok. See also Scribner Book Store.

Scribner's Magazine. New York. Founded Jan. 1887. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons. Not to be confused with Scribner's Monthly (q.v.). Editors: Edward L. Burlingame, 1887-1914, Robert Bridges, 1914-30; Alfred Dashiell, 1930-36, Harlan Logan, 1936-39. Stanford White designed the original cover. August F. Jaccaci and Joseph H. Chapin were art directors. The leading writers of Europe and America were contributors, many literary classics appearing originally as Smith, 1919; W. Morgan Shuster, 1920-21; Glenn Frank, 1921-25; Hewitt H. Howland, 1925-30. It grew out of the literary magazine, Hours at Home (q.v.). It absorbed Putnam's in 1870, the Riverside Magazine, 1870, and Old and New in 1875. Josiah Holland, H. H. Boyesen, Bret Harte, Edward Everett Hale, Helen Hunt Jackson, Charles Dudley Warner, W. C. Brownell, John Muir, John Burroughs, Joel Chandler Harris, John Fox, Jr., George W. Cable, Frank Stockton, Frances Hodgson Burnett, Thomas Nelson Page, James Lane Allen, F. Marion Crawford, William Dean Howells, S. Weir Mitchell, and Henry James were only a few of its distinguished contributors. Alexander W. Drake was art director, 1870-1916, and its illustrations during that period were unexcelled. It was printed by Theodore Low Devienne (q.v.). Stanford White and Augustus Saint-Gaudens designed a new cover for it in 1881. It took its name from the Century Club (q.v.). Noted articles on the Civil War appeared in its early issues, alongside Nicolay and Hay's Lincoln. Timothy Cole, Frederic Remington, John La Farge, Joseph Pennell, Howard Pyle, Charles Dana Gibson, Maxfield Parrish, A. B. Frost, E. W. Kemble, Jay Hambidge, and N. C. Wyeth were among its illustrators.

YANKEE

Yankee. The name in this country applied to the people of New England. During the Revolution applied in derision to New England troops, in Civil War it was applied by the Confederates to any Federal soldier.

Yankee Blade. Waterville, Me. Magazine. Founded 1841, by William Matthews as The Watervillonian. It was later moved to Gardiner, Me., and then to Boston. Merged with the Port Folio in 1856. Revived in 1862 as Harry Hazel's Yankee Blade, it expired in 1894.

Yankee characters. The Yankee was very popular in early American plays, and among the better known ones are Solon Shingle in J. S. Jones's play The People's Lawyer; Jonathan Ploughboy in Samuel Woodworth's The Forest Rose; Bill Ball in J. S. Jones's The Liberty Tree; Jedediah Homebread in J. S. Jones's The Green Mountain Boy; Jefferson S. Batkins in J. S. Jones's The Silver Spoon; Lot Sap Sago in Cornelius A. Logan's Yankee Land; Deuteronomy Dutiful in Cornelius A. Logan's The Vermont Wool Dealer; Hiram Dodge in Maurice Barnett's The Yankee Peddler; Josh Whitcomb in Denman Thompson's The Old Homestead; Jonathan in Royall Tyler's The Contrast. The Yankee is also portrayed in J. R. Lowell's The Biglow Papers; John Neal's The Down-Easters; Seba Smith's Jack Downing; Thomas Chandler Haliburton's The Clockmaker; or, The Sayings and Doings of Samuel Slick.

"Yankee Doodle." A skit sung by the British soldiers in America prior to the American Revolution, which poked fun at the provincial militia. Its catchy tune made it popular and new stanzas were added to it and its development followed the usual pattern of folk balladry. Our native humor began with this song. Yankee Doodle became the prototype of many humorous characters. See O. G. T. Sonneck's Report on the Star-Spangled Banner, Hail Columbia, America, Yankee Doodle (1909), and John Tasker Howard's Our American Music (1939).
